

Harrington Joins First National Bank

Jamie Harrington of Christiana has joined the Murfreesboro office of First National Bank of Middle Tennessee as an Assistant Vice President and Loan Officer, Brian Wilcox, Executive Vice President for the bank, announced.

Harrington will be serving Rutherford County and the Bedford County area, working from the Murfreesboro office at 1708 Gateway Boulevard and the FNB Mortgage office at 635 North Main Street in Shelbyville.

“We are very pleased and excited to have added yet another seasoned professional to our local lending and business development team. Jamie brings with her a wealth of knowledge from many past successes and will be putting this to use in the Rutherford and Bedford County markets,” Wilcox said.

Harrington joins First National after serving the last two years as a financial services officer in Shelbyville and has worked in financial services since 2012. Prior to that she was a community assistant for The Gateway at Knoxville.

She is a 2012 graduate of the University of Tennessee Knoxville, earning a B.S. Degree in Agricultural Resources and Economics. She graduated summa cum laude. She earned Associate of Science degrees in business and general sciences from Walters State Community College, claiming magna cum laude honors with both.

Harrington was born in Grainger County, growing up on a family dairy and tobacco farm which she credits with developing for her a passion for agriculture. “I know the hard work that those who tend to the land put in day after day with little or no recognition. Working alongside of my grandparents and parents, I was taught integrity, trust, honesty, and dedication—attributes that I consider invaluable.”

“I wanted to surround myself with driven individuals who wanted to grow personally and professionally. I believe that I have that potential at First National Bank of Middle Tennessee and have a tremendous wealth of experience around me,” she said.

Harrington quoted the great Mary Kay Ash stating, “Everyone has an invisible sign hanging from their neck saying, “Make me feel important.” “I strive to provide exceptional customer service and enjoy going the extra mile for all customers,” Jamie said.

“Growing up in a small town with one red light, we were known for our southern hospitality. Remembering names and genuinely taking an interest in the person’s day were not a foreign concept to me,” she said. Adding, “I think customers want to do business with me because I treat them the way that I would want to be treated. I will take the time to explain the products and services that they are inquiring about and show them other options that might be more beneficial for them, even if it means the bank is not the best option for them. I want my customers to feel confident that I have researched and found the best product that fits their financial needs.

Harrington is a member of Crossway Baptist Church where she volunteers in the nursery and with the Awana Program. She recently graduated from Leadership Bedford and serves as an ambassador for the Shelbyville-Bedford county Chamber of Commerce.

She and husband Mathew enjoy traveling, watching football, and spoiling their two long haired dachshunds.
